NEW RAILROAD.

Sebree, Ky., June 8.—Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state for a company capitalized at $500,000, which will construct a railroad from Sebree to Dixon, Ky. It will have a continuance to Owensboro. Half of the $20,000 to be raised at Sebree has been subscribed.

HOME MADE COFFIN.

Georgetown, Ky., June 8.—S. R. Betts, the oldest citizen of this place, aged 88, is dead. He was quite an eccentric character, and sometime ago made a coffin in which he wished to be buried. His wish will be respected, and he will be buried in the coffin made by his own hands.

BIG ALIMONY.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 8.—Ex-State Treasurer Scholz, of Evansville, will pay his wife $50,000 alimony and avoid a suit. This is one of the largest amounts for alimony ever offered in the state.

MRS. MCKINLEY'S CONDITION.

Washington, June 8.—Mrs. McKinley's condition is more hopeful. It is now given out that a bone-felon caused her present condition, and that blood poisoning has set in.

BERNHARDT WILL NOT COME.

Lexington, June 8.—It is now said that Sarah Bernhardt will not come to America and play Romeo to Maud Adams Juliet. The reason assigned is that she can't learn English.

ROUGH HOUSE.

Paris, June 8.—M. Labernesque wounded Max Regis in a duel here today. The seconds fell out and a general fight was narrowly averted.

PROMINENT PEOPLE MARRY.

Georgetown, June 8.—Clarence M. Sinclair, of Cincinnati, and Miss Nora Lee Chapman, of this place, were married this evening at the residence of Mr. J. W. Gough.

CHAPTER DEGREE CONFERRED.

Bardonia, June 8.—The Chapter Degree, Royal Arch, was conferred on Gov. Beckham by Rowan Lodge, Lebanon assisting. The governor will soon become a member of Marion Commandery, Lebanon.

BAPTIST INSTITUTE

TODAY A LARGER ATTENDANCE IS ANTICIPATED.

Last night Mr. R. H. Baker was ordained a deacon by the Baptist Institute at the First Baptist church.

Today the attendance at the institute, which was small yesterday is expected to increase. Rev. G. W. Perryman, of the First Baptist church, will preside and several interesting addresses and lectures will be included in the day's program. Among them are:

Addresses: The Teacher as Soul Winner, J. W. Warder; Conditions of Effective Teaching, A. F. Baker; The Sunday School Song Service, J. N. Prestridge; Sunday school Literature, J. K. Nunnally.

Lectures: The Lord's Supper, W. P. Harvey; The Holy Spirit, and Missions, J. O. Bow; Conscience and the Liquor Traffic, J. J. Rucker; Patriotism and the Liquor Traffic, G. Young; The Bible and Giving, A. F. Baker; The Baptist Outlook, J. N. Prestridge.

THE TEACHERS

ELECTION FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS WILL BE JUNE 24.

There are at Present Five or Six Applicants for the Position of Superintendent.

The annual election of teachers for the public schools will be held on June 24, and as usual will arouse much interest.

The principal office to be filled is that of superintendent of the public schools, a position filled during the past year by Prof. C. B. Hatfield. There are at present five or six applicants for the position, all being out of town men. Prof. Hatfield's application will doubtless be filed in due time. It is thought he will be re-elected without difficulty.

There is the usual number of applications for the other positions, but from reports there will be few, if any changes, in the personnel of the teachers.

The President Speechmaking. President McKinley's speeches during his "swing around the circle," or tour of the west, are quite numerous.

ROUGH HOUSE.

Paris, June 8.—M. Labernesque wounded Max Regis in a duel here today. The seconds fell out and a general fight was narrowly averted.

PROMINENT PEOPLE MARRY.

Georgetown, June 8.—Clarence M. Sinclair, of Cincinnati, and Miss Nora Lee Chapman, of this place, were married this evening at the residence of Mr. J. W. Gough.

CHAPTER DEGREE CONFERRED.

DROPPED DEAD

SAM McCURE, HEAD WAITER AT NEW RICHMOND, DIES.

Fell Down in the Hotel Wash Room at 12:30 This Morning and Expired. Twenty-nine Years Old.

Sam McClure, colored, the head waiter at the New Richmond house, dropped dead this morning about 12:30 o'clock, the result of heart trouble.

The deceased was about 27 years of age and one of the most accommodating employees of the hotel. His home was in Smithland, Ky., from where he came a few months ago.

Gus Armstrong, an employee of the hotel, saw McClure when he dropped and ran for aid, but he was dead when it arrived.

T. A. Hibbs, a well known school teacher of the city, is his brother-in-law.

How He Cured the Bell.

The late Father Boyle, who for years was one of the most prominent and popular Catholic priests in Washington, had a great reputation as a wit. Some of his most intimate friends were Protestants and members of the Protestant clergy. A few months before his death he erected a missionary chapel down by the navy yard and bought at a junkshop an old bell which had been discarded by one of the Protestant churches. He sent the bell to a foundry in Georgetown and had several inches of metal pared off the rim. Having thus got rid of a crack, the harsh and discordant tones of the bell became soft and sweet. Meeting a Presbyterian minister not long after, Father Boyle called his attention to the change, and the latter could scarcely believe it was the same bell.

"What to the world did you do to that bell," inquired the Presbyterian pastor, "to cause such a change in the tone?"

"We blessed it and blessed it and blessed it until we got the Presbyterian devil out of it," retorted Father Boyle, "and then it sounded all right."—Washington Star.

THE COUNCIL

Called Meeting for Monday Night in the Council Chamber at the City Hall.

THE INSPECTOR ORDINANCE

Improvements on Clark Street will be Provided for and the Street will Probably be Opened.

$790 TO BE ALLOWED ON JUDGMENT.

The council will meet Monday in called session to consider several matters of interest.

The meat and milk inspector ordinance will come up for second passage, and probably be adopted without opposition. It seems to suit the board of health, although there is some doubt as to the constitutionality of some parts of it.

Another thing that comes up is the allowance of about $790 under an ordinance against Linn White the former sewerage contractor, on an assignment. It is money that has been held back by the city on the contract. Out of this, however, Mrs. Whitesides will get only about $300 after the court costs are paid.

There will be an ordinance for the paving of Clark street from Seventh to Ninth. Mayor Lang will also ask that Clark street be graded and gravelled from Ninth to Tenth. The railroad owns forty feet of the property and the city has been trying to purchase it but has never been able to get a price on it. The mayor's plan is to go ahead and run the street through and settle with the railroad company at some future time.

The report of the fire committee in regard to its finding in the investigation in which two stationmen were trying to show that they were irregularly discharged, will not be submitted to the council. Mayor Lang states that the committee is as far as the matter has to go.

EPWORTH LEAGUE SERVICE.

There will be an interesting meeting of the Epworth League on Monday evening. The devotional service will be led by Mrs. George Warfield, after which there will be a paper on "Reading" by the talented Miss Adah L. Brazelton. The public are cordially invited.

"What gets crowded out is the great test of life," was once said by wise woman, and the more you think it over the more it grows upon you. Life there is not long even at the best, and one can not do everything that comes crowding upon them, and it requires a great deal of puzzling thought to decide what you will do and what you will leave undone. Often you decide the momentous question carelessly, off hand, little realizing that it means how the world will take you, for what you are is branded by what you do, and what is left undone.

A newspaper is very much like life in this respect, things are constantly coming up, more than you are prepared to meet. No day is ever carried through as planned, so no paper ever goes to press containing all that was mapped out, perhaps. What gets crowded out of the newspaper, though, is as great a test of it as it is of life; you have to learn to distinguish between the things of little import and the things of vital interest, or your paper will be a waste of space. You must adjust your life perspective at the angle that will give the most correct view of the useful and the useless in life. To "disipate the energy" on trifles has wrecked many a promising career.

THE LITERARY OUTLOOK.

"Reading a good book, even when it results in the acquisition of no new thought, is still a profitable task, for the reason that it keeps the mental faculties alive."

TWO RECENT HISTORICAL NOVELS

"A CAROLINA CAVALIER."

The Bookman for June announces this as "the best selling book in Boston," which goes to prove that the day of "the historical novel" is not yet over. It is a very readable story of Revolutionary days in the Carolinas by George Carey Eggleston, and is most attractively gotten up, the illustrations being a delight to the eye, and an incentive to read about such charming looking people.

In his foreword, the author says that—"Patriotism, and an unflinching sense of honor—love and heroic devotion—these alone are my themes."
And right well does he keep to his themes. The leading characters are all very fine types of the devoted patriots, who fought so nobly for the freedom of the plucky young Republic, and it is very easy to see how it was that America won out so grandly in her war with Great Britain. Roger Alton, the hero, is quite worthy to be a "hero," with all the halo that surrounds the word.

These are fighting times, and there is fighting galore, bloodshed, adventure, romance, mystery, daring, and love, all the ingredients, in fact, that go to make the run-of-the-mill romantic novel. It is safer not to attempt an outline of the story, for the "mystery" might be revealed, and your interest be made less keen. Through much trial and tribulation they come safely through, and the ending is quite the proper one of reward and retribution.

The women are very high types of the sex feminine, and are as dainty as the men serving them to, even greater deeds, as when Jacqueline Alton facing the assembled great men, indignantly told them:
"I salute Carolina!" she cried, with head thrown back and eyes ablaze.
"I salute the United States!" she cried, liberty! To you strong men it is given to dare and to do. To us weak women it is given only to inspire. Gentlemen, I bid you good night, and I say to you—for all the women of Carolina—we love them!"

The defense of the Alton Manor-house by "Jack" and her friend Helen Vargrave is a very thrilling episode. You encounter many historical personages, men famous in their day and time, whose names have made the history of the Carolinas. Marion, the "Swamp Fox," Gov. Rutledge, Horry, Lincoln, and others. It is a book that will hurt no one to read, being without morbidness, alive with high honor, loyalty, and purpose, and is full enough of stirring action to hold your interest throughout.

"THE HOUSE OF DE MAILLY."

Margaret Horton Potter's "Unconquered" has aroused the interest of the reading public enough to make a new book by her a welcome event.

"The House of De Mailly," however, is very different, and shows the versatility of the young author to a great degree. It is an historical novel, but in a much lighter vein than "Unconquered," and deals with a very different age and time. The story opens in the Court of Louis XV, and all the intrigue and adventure of that time is most interestingly recounted. There you encounter Richelieu, de Chateaux, de Berryer, Duchesse de Chateaux, de Maurepas, and others more or less famous—and infamous—in their day and time. You grow to feel a keen interest in the young hero, Claude de Mailly, and follow his fortunes at Louis' Court with much anxiety.

Without warning the scene shifts to America, to the Baltimore of Richard Carvel, but at some earlier date, and you are delighted to breathe an atmosphere more wholesome, and to mingle in a life more simple and true than the gay court life of France. Here you meet the heroine, Deborah Travis, who is really the finest character in the book. She is quite an unusual young woman, and is a "new woman" very much in advance of her day. The marriage of Claude and Deborah recalls him from his exile, and he carries her back to France where he creates something of a sensation at the court. There is a happy ending, but it comes a little sooner than you anticipate, it strikes you as a trifle abrupt, something omitted that you expected to be there.

The "House of De Mailly" appeared first as a serial in "Harper's Bazaar," and has recently been issued in book form, going rapidly through its third edition. As a story in contrasted social life in the middle of the eighteenth century it is especially interesting, and makes you very glad you belong to the purer, better life—the American.

WITH THE JUNE MAGAZINES.

An unusually interesting number of the "New Lippincott" is the one for June. The novelette is a strong story of English country life by "Maxwell Gray," who is in private life Miss M. G. Buttlett's "The Four-Leaved Clover" has for its setting the tragic winter of the Boer war, when women's souls were so terribly tried. The heroine, Marcia Ludlow, a splendid type of the frank, athletic English girl, finds it difficult to live up to the creed:

"No, I won't be unhappy. I don't like being unhappy. It does no good and it ruins the complexion. Besides, unhappy people are always bored."

There is a happy ending, however, in which the "Victorian Cross" and the magic "Four Leaved Clover" play an interesting part. All of this is finely told, and is some of the best work that "Maxwell Gray" has yet done.
The Princeton college campus story, "Rah, Rah, Rah, Murray," is decidedly the best of the series of the college tales, and has for its motive this thought: "I'm always looking for Princeton men to do something more than that—something with a touch of chivalry about it," which is nobly met in the crisis.

The June Century is a Collega Number, and contains articles and stories bearing on varied college interests. The most distinguishing features of the number, however, are Ex-President Cleveland on "The Venezuelan Boundary Controversy" and the first installment of Frances Hodgson Burnett's serial, "The Making of a Marchioness." There is a very interesting account of "The Young Men's Christian Association in Europe," by W. S. Harwood. The president of Yale university and the provost of the university of Pennsylvania write on the "Alleged Luxury Among College Students." There are a number of stories of more or less varied interest.

McClure's magazine for June contains the usual number of readable stories and articles. The old contributors are in evidence, and also several names new to their list, among them David Gray, whose "Gallop" and hunting stories in the Century have been so clever. There is a story by Sarah Orne Jewett, entitled "A Born Farmer." Act II of Elizabeth Stuart Phelps' play is given. Edwin Lefevre has another Wall street story. Clara Morris continues her "Recollections." There is a scientific article by Prof. Frederick G. Wright on "Geology and the Deluge."

The June magazine is a most attractive issue. Among the most interesting features of this number are a double page of pictures, entitled "Where Golf is Played," showing some of the best of some country club houses in America; a series of curious "Love Stories of the Zoo," told by Clifford Howard; the first installment of a fascinating new serial, "Alleen," by Elizabeth Knight Tompkins; a touching full-page picture of "The Passing of the Farm," by W. L. Taylor, the queer experiences of "Some People I Have Married," by the Rev. D. M. Steele, and a vigorous article on "Women as 'Poor Pay,'" by Edward Bok. Numerous other articles of general and domestic interest fill up the rest of the number. By the Curtis Publishing Co., Philadelphia. One dollar year; ten cents a copy.

The June magazine is a most attractive issue. Among the most interesting features of this number are a double page of pictures, entitled "Where Golf is Played," showing some of the best of some country club houses in America; a series of curious "Love Stories of the Zoo," told by Clifford Howard; the first installment of a fascinating new serial, "Alleen," by Elizabeth Knight Tompkins; a touching full-page picture of "The Passing of the Farm," by W. L. Taylor, the queer experiences of "Some People I Have Married," by the Rev. D. M. Steele, and a vigorous article on "Women as 'Poor Pay,'" by Edward Bok. Numerous other articles of general and domestic interest fill up the rest of the number. By the Curtis Publishing Co., Philadelphia. One dollar year; ten cents a copy.

"Munsey" contains a character sketch of "Helen Miller Gould" that will have its interest for everyone. Stanley Weyman's serial, "Count Hannibal," is growing in strength. The leading article, "British Dual Houses," is charmingly illustrated. Juliet Wilbur Tompkins' "Chronicles of Us" is full of humor and pathos. The "Storyettes" are not in this number, and will be missed by many who are accustomed to turn to them first.

Harper's Magazine presents a very attractive "Table of Contents" with the short story in evidence, as it should be in all the summer magazines. Thoma Bailey Aldrich, who has not been heard from much of late years, contributes a story, as do Cyrus T. Brady, Thomas A. Janvier, and others. Lillian Whiting has a poem, "Another May-Time." Gilbert Parker's serial "The Right of Way," is the feature of interest.

The "Woman's Home Companion" for June contains the usual supply of interesting stories and bright readable articles. The serial, "A Japanese Nightingale," by the young Japanese writer, Onoto Watane, is attracting notice. Edward Page Gaston writes most entertainingly of "Social Life in Our Embassies Abroad."

One of the distinctive features of the "World's Work" for June is a discussion of the negro problem at length and with great frankness by a negro who is a professor in Atlanta university. "The Growth of Wealth," by Charles A. Conant, and "The Education of Preachers," by S. D. McConnell, are among the other articles of interest.

"Trusts and Public Policy" is the opening article of the June Atlantic. It is treated very comprehensively, and will doubtless have a wide reading. "Washington During the Reconstruction" is another article of especial interest.

Hamilton W. Mable's three-part serial, "John Foster," begins in the June "Bookman." "Nine Books of Some Importance" are reviewed. "Sculpture at the Pan-American" is an article of timely interest.

The June Scribner contains the first installment of Ernest Seton-Thompson's biography of a mountain sheep, with illustrations by himself.

PASSING COMMENT.

There is no doubt about June being a woman. She seems to have at hand "samples" of every sort and kind—of weather, desired or undesired. She just has been storming it up through all the year. In the north-west she has furnished a remnant of a blizzard that has caused the anxious question—
Weather, oh, my weather, is it thou art out of tune.
Art thou clinging to December while the earth is in its June?

It is very refreshing to find a man who is willing to acknowledge to the contrary he is in reality possesses, but strives to keep as "the light hid under the bushel." He is quite willing to lay it all down at the feet of woman, but as to sharing it with her, oh, no! he has no part and parcel in it. Recently, though, an unusual thing was witnessed. Just as one of Paducah's prominent churches was being dismissed one Sunday morning, a carriage containing a bridal couple drove up to the adjacent parsonage. Of course the congregation was "lastly interested, but of them all, the only ones that had the courage of their curiosity, were two distinguished gentlemen who, coolly claiming that witnesses were needed, passed within the portals, and saw the event through. If all the world loves a lover, so it does a wedding.

There is a bright man I know who has a clever way of "getting even" with a hated rival. When the young lady to whom he is "mostly" devoted visits a certain city, she is the guest in the home of "the other young man," who is also in love with her. Now, it is the custom of this young man to get the late mail from the post-office box, and this my friend knows, so he always times an unusually fat letter—not stamped "up to weight," either—for that mail, that his rival may have to pay the "cents."

Now, would it not "jar" you to have to pay on the bulky and interesting looking letter from the man whom you feared, to the girl you love? Surely greater revenge than this could no man devise!

It is very curious to see how quickly children imitate the thoughts and spirit of their elders. There is a dear little boy in the city, who is not old enough to talk quite plain. He is the son of one of our distinguished local homeopaths, and attends a small kindergarten. Recently, the pupils were gathered around one of their number who had been absent on account of sickness. With vivid interest he was narrating all about his late illness, dwelling particularly upon the quantity of quinine he had taken; but here there came an interruption—
"Twins!" lisped in a horrified accent the small son of homeopathy. "Why, you must be fully allopath!"
It is not recorded whether a medical war was then and there waged, but the elders who overheard the conversation were vastly amused.

All of us are apt to be confronted, occasionally, with those decidedly uncomfortable ghosts—"the things one would rather not have said," and Ministers are not exempted from such haunting "spooks" any more than ordinary mortals, it seems. It is told on a popular and brilliant minister, who is noted for his extreme politeness and cordiality of manner, and for never hurling harsh epithets at his people, that one Sunday morning he appeared before his congregation—not in this place, however—and stated that he had decided, on entering the church, to exchange the text suggested for his morning discourse, for one more appropriate to the occasion, and suited to the people, and then proceeded to announce, "Thou Fool!" as his subject. An "amiable smile" went over his church, but no one took offense. "Why," was a beautiful tribute to their "knowledge of him and his being above any such sarcasm. It was plain that his mind was more on the body of his sermon than the text. But was it not funny?

Girls, if you are in the habit of saying that you have not received a letter, just as an excuse for not answering it, don't do it. That may have worked in the days when "grandma" was young, and mails and minds alike, moved slowly, but now in this age of cleverness, and complete postal service, you are liable to be caught up with, as par example.
A charming young lady who has often visited Paducah wrote a note of thanks recently to a young man here, who has always been especially nice to her. Of course, he gallantly answered this, but heard nothing in return. Some weeks after he told a friend who was going to the young lady's city to ask her why she had never answered his letter. She said she had never received it. This greatly worried him, as he did not wish to be thought remiss or rude, and, besides, it was an especially bright letter of which he was rather proud, so he decided to do a little postal investigation. He wrote to the Postmaster of the city where the letter was sent, giving description of letter, name, date, etc. After the customary delay, there came to her quite a budget of information, variously signed and attested, and tied with all sorts of red-tapeisms. The inquiry had passed from the hands of the postmaster-in-chief through various deputies, mailing and receiving clerks, to the postman of the street who certified to "the delivery on a certain date of the aforesaid letter to Miss So-and-So of Such-and-Such-a-street, herself."

All this he has quietly rolled up and mailed to the young lady with the simple interrogation, "I thought you did not get my letter?"

He is now awaiting results, but is wishing that he had a kodak of her face when she receives that package.

At the meeting of the U. D. C. on last Tuesday afternoon there was some very interesting "war reminiscences" given. One lady told a little personal experience she had with General Forrest, the great cavalry leader. Forrest was a perfect military genius, whose cavalry tactics are now taught the world over, but he was rather uneducated otherwise, and quite brusque in manner, especially at the beginning of the war; his intimate association with men, the finest the South has ever produced, though, later gave him more polish.

The teller of the tale said she and a friend were very anxious to leave when they were, and join their husbands, but they were both quite young, having married, as was the custom of Southern girls at that time, at an age when girls are now in school. They appeared before General Forrest asking for passports to their destination. The great man simply looked at them and said: "You children talking about being married! You had better be at home with your mothers."

He did not give the passports, but later sent a guard with them to see them safely through, probably on account of their youth.

While the answer was not especially courteous, the spirit that prompted it was kindly, and the ladies readily forgave him his rudeness for the sake of the tribute to their youthful appearance, to which no woman is ever insensible.

Remarkable Caves.

There is a cave near the town of the remarkable stalagmite caves within two hours' walk from Tampa, in eastern Florida. Passing through several chambers rising to a height of from 100 to 200 feet, he reached a vast saloon covering an area of 5,000 square yards. Millions of bats covered the roofs and interfered with the exploration of the narrow passages. One of these, killed with a stick, measured 4 feet 10 inches across the wings.

A Lesson in Politeness.

The Philadelphia Record says that a railroad contractor who recently returned from abroad tells of an experience that befell him in Munich illustrative of the difference in prevailing customs. Armed with a number of letters of introduction to European railroad officials, he made it a point to inquire into the workings of the various systems and was treated with uniform courtesy.

At Munich he thought he had acquired all the information he was after, and as he passed out of the office of the man with whom he had been talking he put on his hat. He had scarcely done so when he was called back by the official who had just been talking to him. "I immediately retraced my steps," said the Philadelphia, "and again entered the office, neglecting to remove my hat. I saw the same official with whom I had been talking, and apologizing for taking up so much of his time, I put the question to him, 'Without a word he reached up, took off my hat and placed it in my hand.' Then he answered my query and 'served me out. It made me feel rather cheap."

A Fish With Teeth on Its Tongue.

The biggest of fresh water fishes, the "arapaima" of the Amazon, in South America, which grows to six feet in length, has teeth on its tongue, so that the latter resembles the file and is used as such. Some kinds of trout also have the same peculiarity. Fishes that swallow their prey entire have their teeth supported on flexible bases as to bend backward, but not forward, in order that their victims shall not escape after they have been once seized. In ages gone by there were ferocious sharks, such as would make a mouthful of you without biting, 70 feet in length. These have been found which are five or six feet long, whereas the highest of the teeth belonging to sharks that exist at the present day are 1 1/2 inches long. Speaking of extinct creatures reminds me to say that all of the early birds—those of early geological times, that is—had teeth, with which they captured the early worms of the same period. Being descendant from reptiles, it is natural that they should possess a dental equipment, but when they ceased to be carnivorous they had no teeth any longer.

LIFE'S WAY.

By "UNCLE HENRY."

"A tramp who was stealing a ride on a P. & E. freight train fell off at Lookout Station and was crushed to death beneath the wheels. His condition indicated that he had become weak from long sickness or hunger and lost his hold, as he rode upon the bumper."

—Excerpt from a newspaper.

I never read such intelligence, and yet it is a common item of news, with only slight change in the wording, without something like a twang at my heart strings. The horror so briefly told, a life so shockingly ended; frustration of the purpose or the hope which prompted the stolen ride; regret that anyone's loved one should be designated a tramp, are thoughts which crowd my mind and cause me to shudder. This is no doubt the case with others, but with me memory is refreshed and a sad incident of life is lived over again.

Years ago I was doing reportorial vice on a P. & E. freight train. One afternoon I was delegated to secure the facts about a man having been crushed by a train of cars. I had been on such missions before and had well formed my story ere I reached the scene of the accident. But I didn't write the account and for reason.

When I came to the scene a crowd was standing about what I considered the unfortunate man. Walking up to the gathering I peered over the shoulders of several men and saw lying upon the ground the injured one. A leg and nearly an entire arm were gone, and apparently he was dead. Two surgeons had just arisen from the work of bandaging the injured limbs.

"It is the old story," said one of the men, of whom I had asked the stereotyped question as to how it had happened. "He was trying to steal a ride on a freight and in some way not clear beneath the wheels."

"Was he not observed and warned?" I asked.

"Oh, yes. But he said that his mother was dying and he must go, and that he had no money or time to spare. His determination made the men less watchful, no doubt."

Recalling a story in connection with the accident I asked: "Did he say where he wished to go?"

"To D—, where he said his people live."

"To D—! That is my old home. Did you hear his name?"

"He told those who lifted him up that his name was Masters or Mason—Charles I believe."

"An old schoolmate" I had just said when the crowd began to fall back. I could then see Masters well and for an instant I was as if rooted to the ground. My mind was so flooded with thoughts of my old days. But I nerved myself, and pressing forward reached the side of the surgeons.

"Gentlemen," said I, "this is an old friend of mine. Can not he be sent to the hospital for?" I was about to say attention, but ere I could do so the elder surgeon said:

"Yes, the ambulance is coming."

"His chance to live—what are they?" I asked.

"One in a thousand."

Charles was under the influence of the anesthetic given him and seemed then as dead. He was still in that condition when the ambulance came and he was lifted up and started toward the hospital. Instantly I decided to follow and if possible to remain with him. This I did as soon as an explanation of my whereabouts. At the hospital through prestige of my calling, I secured permission to go to Charles's side and remain. But he never rallied, and in a few hours I closed his eyes in death. Like a flickering candle his life went out.

My vigil was not without some reward, though my presence was never recognized by Charles. Delirium followed the wearing away of the anesthetic and he talked much of himself, enlightening me of his life since I had left D— and him still in school.

Several years before Charles, though still in his teens, had run away from home, and been lost since to his parents. He could not accept a chiding for conduct at school and thus chose to injure himself and wound his parents. But somehow he had seemed to learn that his mother was ill and his heart had been touched and he was endeavoring to reach her side, to ask her forgiveness ere it was too late. Once Charles seemed to think he was with his mother, for he said:

"The very night I went away I wanted to come back, but I was ashamed over my act. After several days I didn't feel my act. After several days I didn't feel my act. After several days I didn't feel my act."

OPEN THE DOOR.

Open the door, let in the air;
The winds are sweet, and the flowers are fair.
Joy is abroad in the world to-day;
If our door is wide it may come this way.

Open the door!

Open the door, let in the sun;
He hath a smile for every one;
He hath made of the raindrops gold and gems,
He may change our tears to diamonds.
Open the door!

Open the door of the soul, let in Strong, pure thoughts which shall banish sin.
They will grow and bloom with a grace divine.
And their fruit shall be sweeter than that of the vine.

Open the door!

Open the door of the heart; let in Sympathy sweet for stranger and kin,
It will make the halls of the heart so fair.

That angles may enter unawares.
Open the door!

THE RED, RED ROSES.

All in a sunny garden grew
Red roses, rich and fair;
The fragrance of their ruddy hearts
Perfumed the enchanted air.
Wandering there I plucked a rose,
I breathed its beauty bright,
But chill winds swept the garden path.

And spilled its petals light.
Now in my garden lilies tall
Their hearts of snow unfold,
But my stained hands are all unfit
Their spotless blooms to hold.
I place them on the altar high;
Love in my heart is dead.
Oh, why are roses passing fair,
And why are roses red?
—Edith Wheeler in The Muse.

They Were All Tired.

The parlor entertainer has a most amusing experience, although he is not always good natured enough to tell them against himself. One who appreciates a joke, however, relates that on a certain occasion he had been performing at an "old home" and responding to so many encores that the programme became unusually long.

After it was over his hostess with her young daughter came up to him and, after congratulating him on the success of the afternoon, said most cordially:
"Oh, Mr. Blank, come and have some refreshments and sit down for a while.
I know you must be awfully tired."

"Yes," chimed in the sweet young daughter, with the best intentions in the world; "I'm sure we are."—New

During practice a good stroke is one who is regular in his rowing and easy to follow. He must give the big men plenty of time to finish the stroke out.
He must keep them swinging steadily, and in a trial over the whole or any portion of the course he must get orderly possible once of work out of them, so that they are completely rowed out without having got short or hurried on the way. In a race he must know the capabilities of his crew and must be able to feel how they are going, when they want coming off and when they are capable of higher pressure, while above all he must have that degree of generalship which will enable him to decide in a well contested race when to put the pressure on in order to take the advantage of station at a certain point of the course, when to ease off if he is holding his opponent at a slower rate of stroke, how far it is An exchange tells of a lady who decided to scare her husband who was a hard drinker, so he would reform. To do so she procured the costume of a devil, which she saw at a masquerade.

The next time the erring spouse came home feeling happy she quickly donned the costume; as he opened the door she stepped forward and said in a supercilious tone: "Come with me; I am the devil." The result rather startled her, as the response to her gre. ting was:

"THE MAGIC OF EDUCATION."

This is the month of commencement, of graduating exercises, and many are the young folks launched on the great sea of life.

To some will come great success, to others, the same we pray. All we trust, appreciate the work before them, and appreciate the dip into the educational fount the schools and colleges have given them.

"Education is the most enduring kind of property to acquire—a property of soul that no disaster can ruin. Whatever may be the changes that sweep over our land, no power can take away from you your investment in education."

How true these words are. In this day of commercialism—the race for wealth, we hear the oft-pled question: "Is a college education essential to success? The leading men in all walks of life, all professions, have been asked for an expression of their opinion on this much mooted question, and the newspapers and magazines have devoted column after column to its discussion.

The opinions are many and diverse. The man who has made a great success without the benefits of a college education, holds that it is not at all necessary for a young man to attend college, tending that the time thus spent is only wasted energy and years; that the same time devoted to work would have launched the youth well on his journey through life, and most probably have given him a commanding position in the battle to be fought by us all. Then, from the equally successful, comes the admonition, "Get all the education, college training that you can." They argue that nothing benefits the young man just starting in life better than a good stock of the knowledge that colleges instill; that although the youth may be a few years behind in the start, this handicap will be more than offset by his ability, born of the training he has received, to adapt himself to most circumstances and to take advantage of them.

It cannot be disputed that a college trained mind is quicker and more able to grasp the new propositions that arise; to solve them easier.

But, let it be what it may, college education or no college education, we do not essay to say which is the best education, is, as the boys say, a mighty handy thing to have around; is, undoubtedly, a capital that we, all, would be better off for possessing. There is something more in this world than the amassing of great wealth; the rush to be at the head of the many great schemes, the great organizations with which the country is so bountifully supplied. Many is the number of great captains of industry, as they are called in these days, who would part with much of their wealth and, seemingly, great qualifications just for the faculty of appreciation of the things aside from what comes under their vision in the prosecution of their work—appreciation of nature's beauties, of art, music, literature, and science. They have trudged a long journey through life; have risen to high positions in their chosen line of action. Yet what is in it all? To every man comes times when he realizes that he is deficient in much that goes to make up the well rounded character—a man in the true sense of the word. At these times the educated, the college man has the advantage of the "self-made-man." The mind stored with the wealth of knowledge is the happier one, trained as it is in much towards which it can turn at these times for diversion and recreation.

"When home and lands are gone and spent, Then learning remains most excellent."

To the young man, then, just starting out, let us give every possible chance for equipping himself for the fight before him. Let him have all the education possible. He will one day, June, the velleity of a strong story of Preachers by S. D. McConnell, are after he told a friend who was going of English country life by "Maxwell" among the other articles of interest.

well rounded minds, are the ones that will have more to do with the great schemes of the future than all others. Send the boys to school as long as you can, the rising generation will have serious problems to solve. Let it be equipped to do so.

The effort to beautify Taylor park should be pushed before fall comes and finds it still an unkempt, unattractive place that everyone studiously avoids.

The open air band concerts would take well with the general public if the city council would put up a band stand. Prof. Dean agrees to furnish the music free.

It behooves every good, progressive citizen to co-operate in the effort to establish an industrial school in Paducah. Trustee Weille has put on foot, or will put on foot, the movement, and with the proper encouragement and assistance it ought to develop into something of material benefit to Paducah.

The principal thing evident in the decision of the United Presbyterian church that secret order members are not destined to wear "starry crowns," is that they know nothing about secret orders. The man who does not belong to a secret order can't tell anything about it because he doesn't know anything. Those who belong don't tell anything because they know, don't want to tell, and aren't permitted to tell. The moral is that those who take occasion to disparage secret societies may safely be put down as men who are too blinded by ignorant prejudice to see the folly of their railing.

The origin of many of our common words makes an interesting study, says an exchange. We often hear in conversation or read in books about a sardonic smile or a sardonic grin, but we never stop to think that "sardonic" is derived from the name of an island in the Mediterranean sea—Sardonia. There grows in Sardonia a certain plant which when eaten produces the face of the eater into a "sardonic" grin, caused by eating of the Sardonian plant, a smile that a person's face sometimes wears, which as Webster's dictionary says, "gives the appearance of mirth or happiness, but covering pain or misery" is said to be sardonic.

THE SUNDAY CHAT: PADUCAH, KY., JUNE 9, 1901.

TILMAN AND M'LAURIN'S FINISH FIGHT

South Carolina Will Be the Scene of the Bitterest Political Duel Ever Fought in This Country.

This summer will see waged in the Palmetto State a fight that means political death for either Senator Tilman or Senator McLauren, and one that may prove fatal to both. Governor McSweeney has been urged to settle the matter by taking advantage of the resignations of the warring senators and appointing successors to fill the vacancies, but this he says he will not do. There are several candidates for at least one of the vacant senatorships and Governor McSweeney is himself among the number.

heretofore infested the city's main thoroughfare. One rider was coming down the street at a lively clip when he espied a young lady friend. Just as he was in the act of raising his hat in reply to her smiling salutation he was forced to cross the car track to evade a buggy. The street had just been sprinkled and was very slippery and when the young man struck the car track his wheel slipped and he fell his clothes and hands were something remarkable.

A well known engineer had an experience several nights ago that he said frightened him out of three years growth.

"I was on my engine," he related, "and was making up lost time between here and Louisville. I am on the night run and had been delayed at Fulton. I had the throttle wide open and a full head of steam and we were not going less than a mile a minute. I slowed up for a curve and then let her go again and settled down for a good long run on a level stretch. Suddenly we hit something on the track, it looked to me like a pile of ties, and the engine reared up for a brief period of time and then fell back. The cars then came piling on top of us and before I knew what had happened I was pinioned between the tank and the ground with wreckage piled up above me for a mile high it seemed. Then became unconscious. When I awoke I was still in the wreck but somebody had attempted to extract my body from the debris and they had only partially succeeded in their efforts. I seemed all right except that I could not move my feet nor hands. I then woke up and tried to collect my scattered wits. I was as wide awake as I am now and when I found that I could neither move hands or feet you can imagine my fright. I still had use of my lungs and I tell you I did not hesitate in bringing their powers into action. Several of the boys heard me and came over to relieve me of the bonds on my ankles and feet.

"The way it all happened was that I am a sound sleeper and had been called out early in the night to take out a run. I was then on extra and when I arrived at the yards the regular man had shovelled up and I was thrown over. Not caring to go back home I laid down in the round house to sleep until morning. While sleeping the boys had tied my feet and hands."

The Owensboro Elks have adopted a novel plan of increasing their Elks Home fund and at the same time to the interest of their next carnival. The carnival that closed two weeks ago was such a success that they have already begun preparing for the next one, and one of the features will be the award of prizes for well kept artie-tic lawns and premises. A sum will be set aside for this purpose and awards will be made by a disinterested committee, as the prizes were awarded in the floral parade. In this competition the size of the homes will not be considered but to the most artistic, cleanest and best kept premises in the city will be awarded the first prize. This will be an incentive to the beautifying of homes and is in line with the present tendency of artistic improvements.

A few mornings ago an old man came from Mayfield who had never been on a train before. He wore a broad brimmed straw hat, and appeared to be about 50 years old. He attracted no little attention on the train, and did not seem to be the least ashamed of the fact that he had lived all his life without enjoying the luxuries of the "iron horse."

The Evansville Elks will have their carnival in the fall, but it is probable they will not have the Canton Carnival company's excellent attractions, because they have all been at Paducah, Owensboro and Henderson, and many people from these places are expected to attend Evansville's carnival.

The Henderson fair was quite a success, and about the only incident that occurred to mar an otherwise enjoyable week was Saturday when an Evansville woman went in to see Uno, who "eats 'em alive," and fainted when the freak bit off a snake's head. The incident created no little excitement, but the woman was soon brought around, and lost no time in getting as far away from the snake exhibit as possible.

A police judge in Maryland has adopted a new way of dealing with tough prisoners and it is said to be a good one. William Teeters a fugitive from justice, held up the town of Barton a few miles from Cumberland and for several hours defied arrest. He returned the following day to Cumberland and paraded the streets with a drawn revolver in each hand and ordered every one with whom he came in contact to take to the mountains. After throwing the whole town of 1,900 people into the wildest state of excitement Teeters was finally overpowered and taken to the police court.

Before the trial judge, James McConnell, he insulted the court. His honor threw off his coat, left the bench and proceeded to give Teeters an unmerciful beating in open court. After thrashing the prisoner until he cried for mercy His Honor again occupied his judicial position and committed Teeters to jail for a further hearing or another sound and terrible thrashing.

"The key which transmits the Morse signals today is practically the same used by Thomas A. Edison, Andrew Carnegie and other telegraphers thirty years ago," says Electricity.

The Week in Society.

The Doings of the Smart Set the Past Six Days. By Miss Birdie Nash and Mr. Will Brazelton.

REVIEW AND PREVIEW.

The pace that kills has begun to slacken quite decidedly, and Society has enjoyed somewhat of a rest the past week. The entertainments have mostly been the "small and early," with some outing affairs by way of "surprises."

One by one our friends do leave us—the old regulars that the society reporter can depend upon—that is, the clubs. The Magazine club held its last meeting of the season the past week, which makes a finish of the club literary. Some of the card clubs have not yet gone into summer oblivion, and they form the staple interest.

Unless visitors arrive, and some big parties are given, or some excitement happens, the trysting will soon seek out a verdant spot and take its summer beauty sleep, and nothing will awaken it then.

A peep into the future reveals little for the coming week, as far as human eye can see. Of course, there may be more on hand, however, than the calendar notes, we are not claiming entire omniscience.

A CONVERSATION.

Miss Anne Reed entertained very charmingly on Monday evening in honor of the fair visitors in the city. It was a "Progressive Conversation on the Lawn," and every one had the opportunity to show just how bright they were. Dainty refreshments were served during the evening.

INFORMAL CARD PARTY.

The guests at The Inn gave an informal card party on Wednesday evening. It was a very charming little evening.

The gentleman's prize was won by Captain Harrison Watts of Charlotte, North Carolina, and the ladies' prize by Miss Ruth Weil. The consolation prize was given to Miss Helen Decker and Mr. C. G. Woodward of New Orleans bore off the booby prize.

PICNIC SUPPER AT #### LA BELLE PARK.

"Supper at the park" has been a fad of society for several summers, and it is a most pleasant way to spend a warm evening. The first one of the season was on Monday evening, and was a very enjoyable occasion. Captain Harrison Watts of Charlotte, North Carolina, Mr. and Mrs. Woodward, Miss Estelle Woodward and Mr. C. G. Woodward, all of New Orleans, were the guests of honor of the evening.

The merry party included: Mr. and Mrs. Woodward of New Orleans; Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Flournoy, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Wallace, Mesdames A. J. Decker, Mrs. John Campbell, Mrs. Walter Johnson, Mrs. W. M. Rawls, George Flournoy, Armour Gardner, Miss Estelle Woodward, of New Orleans; Misses Myrtle Decker, Helen Decker, Martha Davis, Ruth Weil, Marjorie Scott, Captain Harrison Watts, of North Carolina; Messrs. C. G. Woodward, of New Orleans; Joseph L. Friedman, David Flournoy, Louis Riecke, Edwin J. Paxton, Dow Wilcox and Edward E. Englehart.

D. A. R. MEETING.

Mrs. Leslie Soule was the hostess of the Daughters of the American Revolution on Tuesday afternoon. It was a most entertaining session and a delightful occasion. Besides the usual business transacted, there was a very able and clever paper on "Revolutionary History" written by Miss Edith Hawley, of Huntington, Indiana, and some very charming music by Miss Addie Hart and Miss Virginia Lesh.

These literary and musical features added much to the afternoon's pleasure. It was decided to celebrate July 4 in a patriotic manner, and a suitable and interesting program will be prepared for the occasion. The hostess served delicious refreshments at the conclusion, which was an innovation decidedly pleasant.

THE TUESDAY AFTER-NOON EUCHE CLUB.

Paducah is so essentially a town of daytime entertainments that it is quite a rare pleasure to chronicle one given even "by early candle light," or one where men are allowed to gather. This unusual departure was enjoyed by the Tuesday Afternoon Euchre club when they and their husbands, and some outside guests were most hospitably entertained by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Worten on Tuesday evening. It was quite a delightful occasion, and the evening was most agreeably spent. There were seven tables of euchre. The first prize for ladies, a pretty bronze bust, was won by Mrs. Samuel H. Winstead, and the second, a dainty silver bell, by Mrs. Frank Fisher. The gentleman's prize, handsome pearl handled knife, was captured by Mr. Frank Fisher. The refreshments were delicious and added pleasure to the evening.

Among those present were: Messrs. and Mesdames Harry Hinkle, Clint Wilcox, Leonard James, Walker Bowman, Frank Fisher, Will Hills, Mesdames P. H. Stewart, James Foster, S. H. Winstead, D. L. Sanders, Sam Skinner, Misses Ada Enders, Geraldine Sanders, Allie Sanders, Kate Sanders and Ella Sanders.

UNITED DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY.

The local chapter of the U. D. C. held a most delightful meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the hospitable mansion of Maj. Thomas E. Moss in Arcadia. Mrs. Moss, the gracious hostess, did the occasion all honor. The attendance was larger than usual, and three new members, Mrs. David G. Murrell, Mrs. William T. Anderson and Mrs. Joseph Flash were enrolled. A charming paper on the "Memphis Reunion" Mrs. D. G. Murrell read, and Mrs. Leonard Maxwell, the historian of the chapter, gave some very interesting reminiscences.

The Confederate colors, red and white, were emphasized in the delicious refreshments of strawberries and lemons that were served by Miss Joe Bloomfield and Miss Laura Anderson, picturesque gowned in white and red. This was a most pleasing feature of the happy occasion and was greatly enjoyed. The afternoon was voted a success by the delighted members as they drove toward wards.

THE MAGAZINE CLUB.

The meeting of the Magazine club on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. John P. Campbell was exceedingly interesting and a delightful social occasion as well. There were a number of visitors present besides the regular club members. The reports were unusually full and interesting. "The Outlook" was ably represented by Miss Alice Compton and Miss Myra Gould, but along very different lines, Miss Gould giving glimpses of outdoor life in "Reverie of a Garden," and Miss Compton telling something about "The Different Forms of Gambling."

Mrs. W. A. Gardner and Miss Ora V. Leigh gave some very interesting gleanings from "Harper's Magazine." Mrs. Richard Baker from the "Review of Reviews," reported very ably on "War Ships and their Improvements." Mrs. Edward L. Atkins gave an interesting resume from "The Bookman" of a famous picture and its recovery. It was the last meeting of the season but the usual business session and election of officers was outlined. There was some discussion as to the advisability of joining the Federation of Women's clubs, but no action was taken.

Delightful refreshments, charmingly served, concluded the afternoon's pleasure.

AN OPEN AIR COMEDY.

Quite a social event of the week was the amateur entertainment by Grace church Guild on Tuesday evening. The tennis court of Judge L. D. Husband's residence on Jefferson street, was utilized for an open air theater and made most attractive. Every seat was taken and much of the standing room was occupied, also.

"The Disastrous Rehearsal" a sparkling little comedy, played by seven attractive young women, Miss Lucy Turner, of Wickliffe; Miss Linne Belle Tucker, of Louisville; Miss Flora Hall, Louisville; Mrs. Will Gilbert, Miss Anne Reed, Miss Angio Thomas and Miss Pauline Hinton was the feature of the evening. It represented the trials and woes that befell a Shakespeare club when rehearsing their special roles, and was quite a clever take off. Decided dramatic talent was shown by the fair performers. Amusing monologue impersonations were given before and after the play by Miss Birdie Nash and Mr. Will Brazelton.

Music and refreshments made the evening quite a gala affair. Mr. Maurice Nash in auctioning off the cake that was left, gave a very clever impersonation of Hop Little as auctioneer.

Grace church Guild is composed of a number of young society women, with Mrs. David L. Van Culin the efficient president and they do much good work. This play was quite a financial success as well as otherwise.

A MISSIONARY TEA.

Pleasant social events are the "Missionary Teas," of Grace Episcopal church. The last one of the season was held at the hospitable home of Mrs. Elbridge Palmer on Clark street on Friday evening, and was a most interesting occasion. It was held in the evening that the men of the parish might have some part in the interest of the subject, and the attendance was quite large and gratifying. Miss Alice Compton reported on Mission Work in China from a Secular Point of View, an article by Miss Mary Krout who went to China just before the late trouble there, disbelieving in missions, so her hearty endorsement of them after a careful study of the work, is specially valuable. Mrs. Campbell Flournoy gave an interesting report on Japan and also, called attention to the work being done in Montana.

The meeting was then thrown open to the gentlemen, and Dr. W. M. Cowgill gave the interesting information that one of the most successful missionary workers in Japan is from eastern Kentucky, Rev. Henry Page, who spent his early years in Hopkinsville.

Letters of thanks were read from Rev. Charles Rodifer of Russellville, and Dr. Frank Brooks of the hospital at Fort McAllister, Indian Territory. A pleasant illustration of the smallness of the world was the discovery that Dr. Davis Gardner, an ex-Paducahan, is a member of the Board of the Hospital.

The collection made during the evening was sent to aid the work in Montana. Delightful refreshments were served at the close of the pleasant evening.

YACHTING PARTY.

Messrs. Abram and Wallace Weil were the hosts of a charming Brook Hill party on Tuesday afternoon. It was given in honor of Miss Edith Hawley, of Huntington, Indiana, and Miss Estelle Woodward, of New Orleans, two popular guests in the city, and was a delightful occasion. The party were: Miss Edith Hawley, of Huntington, Indiana; Miss Estelle Woodward, of New Orleans; Miss Virginia Lesh, Miss Martha Davis, Miss Minnie Terrell, Miss Hattie Terrell, Miss Myrtle Decker, Miss Lulu Reed, Miss Laura Sanders, Miss Margie Crumbaugh, Miss Anne Boswell, Miss Florence Yeiser, Miss Ruth Weil.

PROGRESSIVE EUCHE PARTY.

The Misses Riglesberger entertained most pleasantly on Thursday evening in honor of the Misses Volland, of Columbus, Indiana. It was a progressive euchre party, and there were a number of guests present. The first prize were won by Miss Augusta List and Mr. J. J. Read. The consolation prize fell to Miss Kirchhoff and Mrs. Nagel, and the visitor's prize was won by Miss Volland.

An attractive and delicious luncheon was served during the evening.

AN AFTERNOON PRO.

Mrs. James Sherrell entertained with progressive euchre on Thursday afternoon. It was quite a pleasant occasion. The first prize was won by Mrs. Harry Meyers, and the second by Mrs. Frank Effinger, while Mrs. Silas Bryant carried off the consolation gift. A varied and delightful luncheon was served after the game, and was greatly enjoyed by the guests of the afternoon.

The opening ball at the Ozark hotel, Creal Springs, Friday night was most enjoyable in every particular and was attended by quite a crowd of Paducah people. Mr. R. P. Stanley, the genial host, as usual provided everything possible to contribute to the pleasure of his guests, and there was never a more delighted crowd there. Among the guests were prominent people from many cities, and the outlook for Creal is better this season than ever before.

The hotel has been improved, and the accommodations this year will be better than usual, which is saying a great deal, inasmuch as they were never anything but the best. The crowd is already arriving and in a few days the season will be in full swing. The Ozark will get the bulk of Paducah's pleasure seekers this summer.

ABOUT FOLKS.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Bradley returned on Monday from their bridal trip to St. Louis, and are at home at the Bradley residence on West Broadway.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Phillips and Master Joseph Becker Phillips move to their summer residence, "The Pines," on Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. George C. Wallace and family will go out next week. "The Pines" is one of the most attractive places around here, and is the delight of all who visit there.

The "Summer Bible School" will be in session in Hopkinsville June 16-28. The Rev. W. H. Pinkerton, of this city, is on the program for three addresses on "Church History," and it is needless to say that they will be able, instructive and interesting.

Miss Anna Webb, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Beare, of New York are expected today or tomorrow by river from Nashville. Miss Webb will spend the summer with her mother, Mrs. John L. Webb and her sister, Mrs. R. B. Phillips, and give pleasure to her many friends here. Miss Beare, who will visit Miss Webb, is a very bright and charming woman.

Miss Frances Tempest Herndon, one of the city's bright and agreeable girls, has returned from Asheville, N. C., where she has been attending college.

Mrs. W. F. Paxton and Miss Mac Paxton, who have been making the round trip of the City of St. Louis to New Orleans, are expected home this week.

Mr. George Langstaff, Jr., and his charming daughter, Miss Faith, arrived last evening from New York, where Miss Faith has been attending school.

Miss Edith Hawley, who has been the guest of Miss Virginia Lesh, for the past few weeks, returned to her home in Huntington, Ind., on Thursday. Miss Hawley is an exceedingly bright young woman, a graduate of Wellesley college, and was quite popular here.

Mr. George Lanning, who has been the guest of Mr. Douglas Nason, the past few weeks left for his home in Mobile, Ala., on Friday.

Miss Ruth Brooks, of Brooks' Station, is the pleasant guest of Miss Mary Halloran of North Fifth street.

Mr. Edward Scott who graduates with honors at the college of Spring Hill, Tenn., arrived home yesterday.

Miss Kate Richardson, who has been for a year in Chicago with her aunt, Mrs. W. N. Robins, is being welcomed back home by her many friends.

Mrs. Sherwood of Indiana, has been the guest of Mrs. Armour Gardner this week. Mrs. Sherwood has visited here before and is quite a bright and agreeable woman.

Miss Adine N. Morton left for Louisville on Thursday. After a short stay there, she will go to Flat Rock, N. C., to spend several months.

Mr. and Mrs. Muscoe Burnett left on Saturday for New York City, where Mr. Burnett will attend the National Waterworks convention. From there they will take in the Pan-American at Buffalo.

Miss Caffery, of New Orleans, who was the guest of Mrs. D. G. Murrell, was summoned home this week by the sad death of her brother, Lieut. St. John Caffery, of the United States navy. Miss Caffery is the daughter of Ex-Senator Caffery of Louisiana.

Mrs. M. Bloom has returned from a pleasant visit to her daughter, Mrs. A. C. Einstein, of St. Louis.

Miss Louise Cox, who has been for the year at Washington, D. C. at school, has returned home to spend the vacation.

Miss Irene Scott has been the popular guest of Miss Gattin, of Murray, this week.

C. K. AND L. ENTERTAINMENT.

The Catholic Knights and Ladies held a most interesting and pleasant open session at the Elks Hall on Friday evening. It was quite a social occasion, dainty refreshments were served, and a delightful musical and literary program varied the evening's pleasure.

INTERESTING EXHIBIT.

A most interesting exhibit was given on by Miss Kate White's room at the Longfellow building on Friday afternoon. It represented the work of children from ten to twelve years of age, and was one of a very high order of excellence. There were fine specimens of map drawing, language lessons, spelling tests, and compositions both illustrated and written, all of which were distinguished by a remarkable neatness as well as accuracy. The display was a credit alike to pupils and teacher, who is one of the finest in our public schools.

The room was attractively arranged, with the work on the walls, pretty scarfs scattered around, rugs on the floor and an abundance of flowers everywhere, which with the bright faces of the interested children made a pleasant picture. Every parent and member of the Board of Education should have been present. There should be a liberal appreciation of our teachers' and pupils' efforts shown by the public at large.

SOCIAL CALENDAR.

TUESDAY—Dr. and Mrs. S. H. Winstead entertain the Tuesday Euchre club in the evening.

Mrs. Robert McCune entertains at cards in honor of Miss Katherine Bodkin of Bardwell, in the evening.

WEDNESDAY—Miss Mary Hall entertains the Cinque club in honor of her guest, Miss Ruth Brooks, at 3 p. m.

AN AMBITION REALIZED.

The visit of Mrs. Beckham to the famous Gethsemane Abbey has had quite an interest for every one. The unusualness of it, the honor paid the governor's wife, and the beauty of the gracious young woman who was allowed to enter the forbidden ground, are each sufficient to attract special notice. But over all this there comes the gleam of a light, the most attractive that ever shines on land and sea, that of romance. Governor Beckham told it in the little speech he made at the Abbey, and it is well worth giving in his own words. They are brief, but you can read so much between the lines and fill out the love story of the young governor and his charming wife with all ease of imagination. This is what he said:

"Father Abbot and my other friends, I am determined that on this occasion I shall not make you a set speech. A man should not inflict a set speech upon his friends. I feel that here in Nelson, my old home county, and among you, a set speech is not needed. There is one thing, however, in connection with Gethsemane that I must mention. Some of my newspaper friends have innocently spread a false report about me. They have said that this, today, is my first visit to the abbey. I want to correct that report, because I feel that whatever I have achieved in any way is due directly to a visit I paid the abbey some years ago.

"A party of us, young men and girls, came. One of the fathers showed us courtesy over everything that the rules permitted us to see. When we came to that spot beyond which women are barred one of the girls protested laughingly against the exclusion.

"Well, my dear young lady," said the father, "if Mr. Beckham lives to become governor and you should marry him, then I promise that you shall visit the inner part of the monastery."

"And straightway," said Mr. Beckham, "an ambition arose within me to be governor, for I felt that a man's ambition, combined with a woman's curiosity, made a force too strong to be resisted. That girl is Mrs. Beckham."

The combination surely worked! By-the-way, Governor Beckham's luck all through life has been something so phenomenal that his home friends regard him with something akin to superstition. After he was placed on the ticket with Mr. Goebel, a lady who knew him, exclaimed, "If I were Mr. Goebel I would be afraid to have Cripps Beckham next to me. Goebel will be sure to die, and Cripps will be governor. He never misses anything."

He certainly won all he planned to, that day at "Old Gethsemane," and he would have been more than human to have felt no thrill of pleasure and something akin to pride, when he told of his realized ambition and gazed upon his beautiful wife, whom the noble monks were delighted to honor.

ELOQUENT ADDRESS.

On Thursday evening the Rev. G. W. Briggs, D. D., of this city, delivered the commencement address to the graduating class of the Hopkinsville public high school. The Daily Kentucky New Era gives the following synopsis of it, which we quote here for the benefit of the Paducah graduates. They are good words for any body, though:

"Dr. George W. Briggs' commencement address was heard with the closest attention and through appreciation. It was one of the most practical and appropriate addresses which Hopkinsville people ever have been sufficiently fortunate to hear and was spoken with the charm of manner which marks all of Dr. Briggs' public utterances.

"Dr. Briggs began his address by a comparison between school life and the desert, experience of the children of Israel. Both were to be described as dreary and depressing; and yet both were vital, indispensable. Had Moses marched straight from the Red Sea to the Promised Land he would have reached its border with a nation of slaves, completely at the mercy of the war-like Canaanites. After 40 years schooling in the desert, Joshua crossed the Jordan with an army of veteran soldiers, insured to hardships and trained to war, invincible.

"He then compared himself to Caleb or Joshua who were sent to spy out the Promised Land and returned with their message to expectant Israel. The message today and of old would be much the same: 'It is a land flowing with milk and honey, but the cities are walled and very high, and moreover we saw the sons of Anak there.'

"Life, the speaker insisted, was not a disappointment. The world was full of prizes, yet the young graduate going forth would have to prove himself able to take them. He would find his passport demanded at every step of the way.

"In view of all this what did these young people need? Three things, 1, sound bodies, 2, educated minds, 3, sound hearts. After discussing the first two the speaker took up the third and substituted for the phrase 'Sound heart' the word 'Principles.' What our young people needed most nowadays was principles. Not that they were 'unprincipled' but that they did not have a number of moral and vital questions settled and laid on the plain. He insisted that women should have the same principles as men and to divide them as Miss Power Cobbe thought they were doing, the men taking courage and truth, the women purity and temperance. If asked to select one virtue pre-eminent among others, at the basis of others it would be truth.

"In conclusion he gave the community this advice. Take care who teaches your boy, and make up your mind that you don't teach him when you think you do. No man but a good man should be a teacher; and parents teach not by what they say but by what they do."

ther wan with blinders on. I'd leap off th' beach. This horrible fluke iv a decision throws a gr-rest, an' almost blindin' light on th' case. I will turn it off. (McKenna J. concurs but thinks it ought to be blower out.) But where was I? I must put on me specks. Oh, about th' limons. Well, th' decision iv th' court (th' others dissentin') is as follows: First, that th' District of Columbia is a state; second, that it is not; third, that New York is a state; fourth, that it is a crown colony; fifth, that all states are states an' all territories are territories in th' eyes iv th' powers, but God knows what they are at home. In th' case iv Hogan versus Mullins, th' decision is he must paper th' barn. (Hinsbury VIII, sixteenth, six, four, eleven.) In Higgins versus et al, th' cow belonged. (Louis XIV, 90 in rem.) In E. P. Vigore versus ad Lib, th' custody iv th' childer, I'll now fall back a furlong or two in me chair, while me learned but misguided colleagues read th' history iv Ireland to show ye how wrong I am. But mind ye, what I've said goes. I let thim talk because it exercises th'ir throats, but ye've heard all th' decision on th' limons case that'll get into th' fourth reader. A voice from th' audience: "Do I get me money back?" Brown J.: "Who are ye?" Th' voice: "Th' man that owned th' limons." Brown J.: "I don't know." (Gray J. White J. dissentin' an' th' rest iv th' birds concurrin', but fr' entirely different reasons.)

"An' there ye have th' decision, Minnissy, that's shaken th' little iv th' nation to th' very foundations, or will if they try to read it. 'Tis all right. Look it over some time. 'Tis fine sport, if ye don't care fr' checkers. Some say it laves th' flag up in th' air, some that's where it laves th' constitution. Anyhow, something's in th' air. But there's wan thing I'm sure about."

"What's that?" asked Mr. Hennessy. "That," said Mr. Dooley, "no matter whether th' constitution follows th' flag or not, th' Supreme Court follows th' election returns."

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

Something Old, Something New, Chiefly Borrowed, and For You.

I once asked my dainty, plainly dressed maid, why working-girls wore such unbecoming clothes on the street. "Well, you see, ma'am," she said, half in pity, half in defense, "the poor things have no other place to wear them." Do you suppose that is why so many of their mistresses habitually do the same?—Helen Waterson Moody, in The Ladies' Home Journal for June.

An odd dinner table decoration was shown recently in London, where there were about sixteen guests, and, of course, a large board. The center was set out on an old-fashioned orchard, with small apple and pear trees growing out of soft green turf. Little gravel paths were neatly carved out and small bridges thrown over miniature streams, the whole looking most effective on the snowy table cloth under a soft, restful, lighting effect.

The tubbing possibilities of silk madras is said to be excellent. It not only washes with all the good humor of a cup towel, but it actually grows more beautiful for its aquatic experiences. A sweet little frock, in a clear shade of what is called pottery yellow, is made up with bands of Persian cotton embroidery and the waist buttons in the back, as many wash waists do this season.

It is asserted that the coming will undoubtedly be a white summer. All the white fabrics, from India net to serge, will be popular. Wide, soft, satines will be decorative part of summer costumes.

White mohair in soft flush will be a favored material for costumes. Flowered muslins will be made up over white for a fresh, dainty effect.

Hats trimmed with the tiny Dresden roses will be a very charming accompaniment.

When the summer's sun is bright and strong enough for garden parties we will see adorable frocks of very thin pastel colored crepe de chine and batiste tucked in sunburst effects. The center of every sunburst will be a flower of lace applied flat.

Have you ever asked a young woman who she dresses to please? says an exchange, she will invariably answer herself, but the statement is mendacious in every instance, save in those of the dress-reformer—and that means the woman without hope! In the palmy days of Greece three philosophers sat against the sunny side of the temple, scratching themselves and discussing the infinite and the branches thereof.

"A woman," said one, "dresses to please the men."

"A woman," said the other, assertively, "dresses to worry the other woman."

The discussion waxed acrimonious until both appealed to the third, who belonged to the school of the trimmers. "A woman," said he, "dresses to please the men, and thereby worry the other woman."

A very pretty idea that originated with a defunct Lady Airie, and which has been revived by Lady Warwick, is the planting of a Garden of Friendship.

The following should refute a too popular theory: "The minister's wife had the floor. 'There is a general belief,' she said, 'that ministers' families live the life of rosate deadbeats. Salaries are not large, as a rule, but the perquisites supposed to flow upward are the envy of congregations and the laity at large. Every one will tell you that the rail roads give us passes or half rates and that hotels invite us to make long stops at merely nominal cost.'"

She sighed heavily. "In fact, ministers pay exactly the mileage on railroads that other people do, missionaries alone enjoying a reduction of rates. No difference is made at hotels, and if there are any perquisites save those given for marrying folk, I have yet to find out what they are—and I've been a poor minister's wife nearly a score of years. Yet a member of the guild told me the other day that I ought to thank my stars that I had been born lucky instead of rich."

There is too great a lack in the practical education of our girls. Such a practical phase of a woman's life as the realization and meeting of honest obligations never enters into a girl's studies at school, colleges, or in the vast majority of cases, even at home. We go on and let our girls study useless ologies and isms, and accumulate a vast amount of undigested and unintelligible information when never even for a single moment, will be of the slightest use to them in their lives. But of the practical things, yes, the fundamental principles which must govern their lives, they are taught either nothing or little.

There is where we are floundering in this country, despite our boasts of progress in matters educational. The things we ought to know we know not, and the things which avail little are often our choicest boasts—Edward Bok, in The Ladies' Home Journal for June.

A SHATTERED IDEAL. AT SIXTEEN. "Oh, the man whom I wed must be handsome and tall."

Said a maiden just out of her frocks: "I can't love a man who in statue is small. And I won't marry houses and stocks. Of course, he must keep me as papa does now."

Still I'll start on an income quite small. But I never will marry"—and mark well her vow—"A man who is not six feet tall."

AT TWENTY-THREE. "I think that tall men are so nice," said this girl. "But, of course, I'll not marry for looks."

Big, broad-shouldered fellows, with hair that will curl, The kind you read of in books, I love to see men who walk head erect, Their chests expanded with pride; And deep in my heart I hope and expect To be such a man's darling bride."

AT TWENTY-EIGHT. She was nervous, of course, as she walked up the aisle. And she looked as she wished it were over; But she held by the arm, with a conquering smile. A man who was scarce five feet four—Detroit Free Press.

LET US BELIEVE. That there is hope for all the hearts that grieve; That somewhere night Drifts to a morning beautiful with light. And that the wrong—Though now it triumphs, yields no scepter long. But right will reign. Throned where the waves of Error beat in vain!—FRANK L. STANTON.

FOR JUNE BRIDES. To the lot of June brides fall the exquisite lace, chiffon and net gowns that are among the latest novelties. Liberty silk, crepe de chine and louisine are also pressed into service, and there are some qualities of the latest named soft silk that make up most charmingly in the rather simple outlined that are fashionable for wedding gowns this season. The princess is the favorite form, but very much softened and improved by the folds of the material being draped across the upper part of the waist and also the upper part of the skirt, where they are caught with a long spray of orange blossoms and a chiffon rosette.

When the gown is made with a regular waist this is made invariably with a long pointed effect in front, but always soft folds are draped in surplus fashion, or caught up at one side with sprays of the orange blossoms. A rather classical wedding gown of white crepe de chine made in princess style has a band of seed pearls in a Grecian pattern around the train and up the side. There is a tucked yoke and undersleeves of chiffon, and the yoke is out lined with the same pattern of pearl embroidery. This is decidedly new and most charming and becoming design.

Lilies-of-the-valley form a most appropriate decoration for the bride's gown when orange blossoms are not attainable. They mingle with admirable effect with lace, tulle and the softer silks, such as peau de soie, lousine and the liberty weaves. They form the border of the panels of a princess gown and are set so closely together that the effect at a distance is that of a fine ruche. A bunch of the same blossoms is used to secure the veil upon the collar, and again they form a garniture upon the broad tulle sashes that depend from the corsage. The underskirt of this costume, and which will be seen under the paneled princess overdress, is of closely pleated tulle, which material again is used to drape the corsage, and for chemise and undersleeves. The upper and lower portions of sleeve are lace trimmed.—Commercial Appeal.

"Yes, sir, I did my best to train my daughter up as an accomplished parliamentarian. I took her to meetings to give her a chance to listen to the rulings of able chairmen, and I had her learn the text books on the subject by heart. I thought I had her perfect in the business but I was mistaken. She attended a convention not long ago and pretty soon she had a chance to appeal from a decidedly unjust ruling of the chair, and how do you suppose she did it?" "Well," "She was excited, you know, and this is what she said: 'You are a mean old fright and I just hate you! So there!' And then she burst into tears and sat down. No, sir, woman's nature will have to change before she will ever become a parliamentarian."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

We know that science plumes her wings For wider and more wondrous flight. That wealth on high her signal flags, And art, responsive, leaps to light.

We know that men will wiser grow, But will the tender heart keep pace? Will men love and pity know For each downtrodden, helpless race?

Will the dumb creatures God has made Who brighten earth and share our toil, To you for help come untrayed, Nor from your cruelty recoil?

The answers to my questions lie, O little child, within your heart; They will become earth's battle cry Before the century shall depart.—NINETTE M. LOWATER, in Christian Work.

SMALL BOY AND QUO VADIS. The small boy who sells the "Quo VADIS" books in front of the New E. theatre was exercising his lungs to the extreme limit when a diminutive newsboy approached him.

"Koo Vadih!" on'y 10 cents! Singin' wishe's great book, only 10 cents!" yelled the dealer in literature.

"What's de name—me hearin' ain't good?" inquired the boy with the bundle of papers.

"Koo Vadih!" on'y 10 cents! G'wan! youse ain't got no answer comin' to youse!" replied the bookseller contemptuously.

"Huh!" said the boy with the papers, "I'll bet youse a nicker youse don't know what's de meanin' of that 'Koo Vadih' youse is trannin' out your chest about!"

"Youse is on fer a nicker!" answered the bookseller.

"Den what's de answer?"

"Is youse t'ristin' fer knowledge?" inquired the bookseller.

"I got a t'rist on me t'ree feet long an' I'll take a nicker's worth," said the boy with the papers.

"An' youse wants to know de meanin' of 'Koo Vadih'?"

"Dat's de game."

"Well," answered the bookseller, "a Dago book an' a Dago name, 'Koo Vadih' you gots' at!"—New York Journal.

PRECOCIOUS YOUTH.

It was on a steam railway going from Washington to Philadelphia that I overheard the following conversation between a little boy, just at the interesting age, anxious to know, and his aunt, whose patience was severely tested by the questions of little Willie. The first to attract his attention was a buzzard flying high in the air.

"Oh, auntie," he exclaimed, "look at that chicken way up there."

"That's no chicken, Willie, that's a buzzard."

"But, auntie, I don't hear him buzz."

"Auntie, look at that man pumping the cow; is she punctured?"

"He is milking the cow, Willie. Do be still for awhile."

After awhile, he spied several pumpkins in a field, and asked:

"Auntie, is a pun'kin a grown-up orange?" Auntie kept quiet in hopes of bringing him to a stop.

Next to meet his gaze was a man walking through the car.

"Auntie, is that man drunk?"

Hush, Willie; it is the motion of the car that makes him walk so crooked."

"But, auntie, papa walks that way on the street when he leaves the club."

"Will you be quiet for a while, if you please?"

"Auntie, look at the moon. Where did all the stars come from?"

"I don't know, Willie. Don't ask so many questions."

"Did the moon lay 'em, auntie?"

And as darkness drew on little Willie began to nod, and auntie gave a sigh of relief.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

JUST SO.

It is one of the prime secrets of happiness to recognize and accept one's natural limitations, but philosophy of this kind is perhaps hardly to be expected of children.

A little girl had sent back her plate for turkey two or three times, and had been helped bountifully to all the good things that go to make up a grand Christmas dinner. Finally she was observed looking rather disconsolately at her unfinished plate of trifle.

"What's the matter, Ethel?" asked Uncle John. "You look mournful."

"That's just the matter," said Ethel. "I am mor'n full."

And then she wondered why everybody laughed.—From Stray Stories.

LED ALL THE REST.

"Now," said the public school teacher, "name the presidents in their order."

"Adams, Washington," began the bright little girl.

"Wrong, Washington was first."

"Oh, no! Mr. Adams must have been first, 'cause my Sunday school teacher told me he was the first man."—Philadelphia Press.

SONG OF THE OPEN TROLLEY.

When drenching torrents fall to earth Or chilling breezes gambol, 'Tis then I leave my dismal shed And o'er the city amble. The rain it soaks my bouncing floor With many a flowing puddle, While flapping curtains shape their drips.

Where happy people huddle, My seats are soaked at either end. I'm full of mud—O, golly, You can not guess what fun it is To be an open trolley.

Where sunny skies enunciate the town, I'd rather keep my stable, But let it rain, I hustle out As fast as I am able. The cooler blows the sudden gale, The happier it makes me, And I can offer lively times To every one who takes me.

Zip—Clang! My cheerful crossing gong Sends forth its joyous pealings And, dripping wet, I scamper on—O, darn the public's feelings.

I love to dump an angry man Where mud is thickest lying. To hear in part his words profane And then go past him flying. It also makes me glad to see The patient people standing, While dripping fast on every hat, A waterfall is hanging.

I wonder why they take me off In freezing winter weather; We're the boss, I'd do away With shut cars altogether.—Arthur H. Folwell in Brooklyn Eagle.
